Dear Professor Heeren,

On behalf of the Liverpool City Region Destination Partnership (LCRDP) I'm writing in support of Liverpool's bid to host the International Mass Spectrometry Conference in 2030.

LCRDP (formerly Marketing Liverpool) is the city region's long-established Destination Management Organisation. Through our Liverpool Convention Bureau, Visit Liverpool and Club Liverpool teams, we have the connections and channels to help propel your event to even greater levels of success.

Our award-winning Liverpool Convention Bureau team take great pride in helping deliver world-class events and exhibitions of all kinds. Through our considerable convening power, we work to bring hotels, attractions and venues together, to pull out all the stops when it comes to making incredible events happen.

We know event organisers want great value, a brilliant venue, excellent transport, strong city-wide support, effective promotion, an engaged local audience, sell-out tickets and exceptional reviews. Liverpool is a city which works hard to help ensure all these things are made possible.

A culturally rich, world-famous, waterfront city, bursting with fabulous, fun and utterly fantastic things to do, all within a 20-minute, delegate-friendly, walking distance of Liverpool Experience Campus (LEX). We are home to more museums and galleries than anywhere else in the UK outside of London. We have excellent transport links, with two international airports within 40 minutes' drive and London is just two hours away by train.

Liverpool City Region is famous for being a friendly place and perennially placed among the most welcoming places in the UK. The region is a living, breathing, ever-changing, ever evolving, thriving and dynamic place that at any one time is simultaneously a city of music, art, heritage, culture, innovation, sport, entertainment, leisure, knowledge and business. We have it all and crucially, we'd love to share it with you too.

Warm wishes,

Natalie Wyatt
